Tips for Submission

The design project you submitted will be reviewed first by SHAPL to confirm content suitability and sincerity. Content review is not a judgement, but unsuitable projects are not published on the platform.

Professionals and consumers will first see entries when they are published. All entries are evaluated based on media materials, images, and text submitted by participants, so all submitted materials help evaluators understand the design.

It is recommended to use easy and intuitive words rather than difficult words. Especially the main image, please keep in mind that it determines the first impression. The good use of additional materials such as video and additional contents that show the charm of the entry is also helpful.

Participations

There is no limit to participating product items, qualifications, and number of entries in the SHAPL Design Contest. You can participate as an individual or as a team. You can participate in all categories of product design. It is also OK to submit multiple designs to the same category.

Content Review

Content review is not a judgement. It is a procedure to check if the submitted project is appropriate to be posted on the platform and reviewed by consumers and professionals. The content review will be conducted once after the end of the submission period and once before the entries are going to be published. If the submitted work cannot meet these criteria, it won't be published even if it is selected as one of the main entries.

- Has the designer faithfully filled out the information required by the SHAPL Design Contest?
- Is the submitted material written in English?
- Is a design incomplete that is in the Idea / Sketch phases, or 3D rendering that consumers do not recognize as a product?
- Does the submitted design NOT contain the logo of a particular brand?

Voting & Judging

All designs posted on the platform are subject to review by consumers and experts. Evaluating a design from an expert's perspective and looking at it from a consumer's perspective may be very different. The SHAPL Design Contest provides results for both sides. Consumer voting and expert review will take place for 30 days from the date of publication. The results of the voting and judging will be collected after the period ends and the result will be published when the winner is announced.

Evaluation Criteria

Consumer Voting

- Sum of the number of 'like' for 30 days.
- One-person, one-'LIKE' click on the same design
 - If a vote is fabricated, the design can be disqualified after consideration.

Professional Judging

- The aesthetic, functional, and quantitative nature of the design (examination of the appearance, materials and product function of the design)
- Marketability of the design (Combine multiple factors for sale in the market)
- Production efficiency of the design (determine whether it is possible or not in relation to production)

Criteria for design plagiarism

- SHAPL has the following criteria for design plagiarism. Before you sign up, please ensure that your design does not meet the criteria below.
- If judged to be plagiarism, you will be disqualified from the examination and award.
 - Do you have the same concept design in the same product line?
 - Regardless of the product line, are there products that match the main form of the build?
 - Do you have a design that has the same concept and function in a different category?
